Spooky2 Q&A 💡

Why does GenX yield fewer frequency matches in reverse lookup compared to XM?

GenX has fewer reverse lookup matches than XM due to its higher frequency range. Many of these higher frequencies aren't included in the database, resulting in fewer matches than XM. Click here to learn more.

How do you determine which generator to use for specific frequencies?

For frequencies above 5 MHz, GeneratorX or GeneratorX Pro is ideal, especially for scans and high-frequency programs like essential oils or molecular weight (MW) programs. The GX General Biofeedback Scan covers Spooky2 Pulse scan frequencies. Use GX for scanning if available, but prioritize Pulse for healing frequency identification if you have both. ## Spooky2 Discussions

Spooky2 Rife for Life Facebook Group

How many GenX and XM generators do I need to run a Spooky2 setup for treating multiple people with different conditions?

You only need one GenX for accurate biofeedback scans. Once you have it, you can expand with XM generators. Each person would require a dedicated XM generator to treat multiple people with different issues. Click here to see more details.

What is the point of the holographic stickers if we can use the Remote?

Paper stickers and holographic stickers serve distinct purposes. Ordinary paper stickers are primarily used for wrapping DNA samples and can be substituted with A4 paper or medical tape if needed. In contrast, holographic stickers are designed to imprint frequencies and can be applied directly to the body. These two types of stickers differ in both usage and functionality. Is there a frequency for lowering/inhibiting estrogen in males?

There are also DH presets for Estrogen & Progesterone balance and Testosterone balance. I know the first one works well because I get the same symptoms when I use estrogen-lowering supplements. Click here to see more discussion.
